NFWL ANNUAL CONFERENCE

THE FRANCIS MARION HOTEL, CHARLESTON, SC | NOVEMBER 14-16 2022

Briashmel Bell, University of South Carolina

Briashmel Bell is a senior Political Science and Spanish double major at the University of South Carolina. Politics, pageantry, fitness, and sports are a few of her passions and favorite pastimes. Briashmel is the President of the Gamma Chi Chapter of Pi Sigma Alpha National Honor Society. She also represented the city of North Charleston at the 2022 Miss South Carolina USA pageant where her platform was Gen Z Polity: Getting younger generations politically involved. Practicing sports law, and eventually becoming a team owner in the NBA, is one of her most profound career goals.

Anna Dueholm, Clemson University

Anna Dueholm is a junior at Clemson University Honors College studying philosophy and women's leadership. As the daughter of a foreign service officer, she was born in Washington, DC but spent most of her life overseas. Anna serves as Assistant Attorney General and founder and President of the mock trial team at Clemson. Most recently, Anna was an intern for the Mandela Washington Fellowship, the flagship program for the State Department's Young African Leaders Initiative, and she previously interned for Lotze Mosley, a top criminal defense law firm in DC, and the Charleston Forum, a nonprofit founded to address racial inequality following the Mother Emmanuel tragedy. After attending law school, she plans to work in the civil and human rights field.

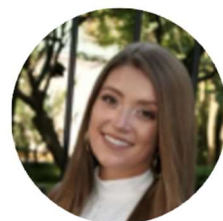

Maeve Smith, University of South Carolina

Maeve Smith is a junior at the University of South Carolina Honors College where she studies political science with a concentration in national security & international affairs, and a minor in public speech & communication. Currently, Maeve is working to further explore her interests in conflict prevention & resolution as an undergraduate researcher with the Language Conflict Project, as an intern with the U.S. Department of State, and as a Critical Language Scholar. On campus, Maeve enjoys captaining her mock trial team, working as a national fellowships' ambassador, and serving as an elected student senator.

Madison Pollock, Clemson University

Madison Pollock is a Junior Biological Sciences Major and Psychology Minor at Clemson University Honors College. As a premedical undergraduate, she hopes to one day invoke change in the injustices that are rooted in America's healthcare system via legislation. Currently, Madison is shadowing doctors of various specialties to familiarize herself with the medical field. To balance schoolwork and self-care, she likes to take long walks outside on Clemson's beautiful campus. This allows Madison to prioritize mental health so that she can perform at an optimal level when she is called to do so.

Hailey Young, University of South Carolina

Hailey is a native of Aiken, South Carolina, and a Sophomore at the University of South Carolina in Columbia where her major is Sports and Entertainment Management. In her free time, she is interested in politics, hunting, Gamecock football, and spending time with her friends and family.
